Basketball Play Situations

1-Play: After Official's time-out in fourth quarter, A1 pushes B1. While ball is being taken to the free throw line or during the free throw, there is an unsportsmanlike foul committed by B2 or there is a free throw violation by the free thrower. Does 8-5-exception 1 apply or does penalty under 9-1 apply?

Ruling: The exception under 8-5 was written on the assumption that there will be no subsequent infraction. If there is a subsequent infraction, the violation penalty or the double foul or false double foul penalty applies. If it is a foul by B, ball is tossed at center after the last throw. If it is a violation by the free thrower, ball is awarded to the opponent out of bounds opposite the free throw line.

2-Play: Play 8 on Page 60 of the Case Book refers to a foul which occurs before the free throw as "in flight." Can there be continuing motion during free throw?

Ruling: Yes. The term "throwing motion starts" should be substituted for "ball is in flight."

3-Play: During last two minutes, A1 has ball in his front court near division line. B1 takes a position within reaching distance of A1 and Official starts his 5 second count. A1 uses his back foot as the pivot foot and steps backward with the non-pivot foot to increase the distance between A1 and B1. Should the 5-second count stop when this distance is lengthened?

Ruling: No. If the 5-second held ball count starts, it should continue as long as B1 holds his position while A1 holds the ball without moving to a new position by moving his pivot foot. This is consistent with administration of the 3-second lane rule.

4-Play: A1 has the ball in his front court near division line. Referee starts his 5 second held ball count but before it is finished, A1 drops the ball for a stationary dribble and then secures possession without having changed the location of his pivot foot. Should 5-second count continue?

Ruling: No. The count stops when ball is dropped for a dribble. A new count begins when he again secures possession.

5-Play: At the start of a game, Timer forgets to start the clock or it is mechanically defective. Ball is tossed and A1 scores on a tip-off play. Should score count?

Ruling: If there are many irregularities connected with the scoring and timing, the Officials might be justified in cancelling all activity during the first minute or so of play and starting the game over. However, if it is only a case of failure to start the clock, the Official will be on safer grounds to rule that the score must count, even though the clock was not running. As outlined in Play 75 of the Case Book, the question of whether the clock is running has no influence on whether the ball is alive. This situation is also related to Play 7 on Page 45 of the Case Book. This gives the Official authority to order a game started again in case there is irregularity on the floor such as having the jumpers face the wrong way so that a goal is scored in the wrong basket. It is doubtful whether that should apply in the case cited.

6-Play: A1 commits a technical foul but it is not discovered until later in the game. Is such foul always penalized and, if penalized, how is it administered?

Ruling: If the note under 10-6-Penalty is followed literally, such foul is penalized as if it had occurred at the time of discovery. However, the Official is granted some discretionary authority in determining whether it is reasonable to enforce a penalty for an act which occurred a considerable time before discovery. As an illustration, a player might have been playing several minutes without having reported to the Scorer and discovery might be made at the end of a tie game. Obviously, if discovery had been made earlier in the game, the entire style of play might have been different if the free throw for the foul had been successful. Official would have authority to rule that too much

The Flying Dutchman

By Charlie Vettiner

Believe it or not, the Dutchman answered by telephone, wire and letter 112 requests for interpretations on the new basketball rules. This number excludes those answered for men who called directly in person at the office. There was a time when the clinic director made his sashay over the state, visited fifteen towns, and relaxed for a dozen months. "Them days are gone."

Over ninety per cent of the ruling requests concerned the rule involving fouls in the closing few minutes of the game. Brethren of Kentucky's basketball loving regions, that rule has to be changed.

Just a suggestion to the National Federation of High School Athletic Associations from the Dutchman: "You have a National Advisory Committee which to this member's knowledge has never functioned as a body. Why not get this group together for a meeting in Chicago for the purpose of conveying to you the thinking of leaders in their areas?"

The Flying Dutchman was appointed to this National Advisory Committee a few years ago. What the duties of the office are remain a mystery. If the information had not appeared in the Courier-Journal and on the first page of the rule book, your Dutch friend still would not know that he was a member of such a group.

The names of the men representing various states indicate that they could be of invaluable service to the betterment of the game of basketball if they got together with the rules makers and offered suggestions.

Officials are reporting that on too many occasions coaches are trying to tell them how they want the game officiated, by cornering them before the game or between halves. Officials, especially younger ones, should not be subjected to such pressure. Certainly if plays are being miscalled or rules misinterpreted, any coach has the right to respectfully call the official's attention to his error. What the Dutchman is talking about are those mentors who attempt to set the "tempo" of the officiating. Those fellows are a drug on the market.

Before a game an official was asked by a leading coach to call them closely. At the half three of his boys had four personal fouls recorded on them. Approaching the two whistlers between halves he raved, "For Pete's sake why don't you let them play ball?"

One thing is certain. Coaches like the brand of officiating they are getting this year. The "gripes" this year to the Dutchman have been conspicuous by their absence. Last year they were "Legion."

Calling all basketball officials! Please be reminded that whenever you are involved in serious difficulty with a coach, player or crowd you are to write the Flying Dutchman at once, confessing all and telling how you handled the situation.

And now for that Honor Pipe Award which is given each month to those people who do things unselfishly for others. That cob pipe has become an institution in Kentucky, and even out of the state.

There is a man in the mountains of Kentucky who should have had this honor years ago for all he has done to bring progress and better living to the people there. Giving of himself freely, molding champions, building character, and teaching and practicing sportsmanship, this gentleman richly deserves the "COB PIPE OF THE MONTH AWARD." You guessed it, fans. That honor goes to my friend and a great guy, Russ Williamson of Inez. The pipe's on its way, Russ.

Basketball Play Situations

time elapsed before discovery to warrant penalty for a technical infraction.

7-Play: A1 has ball in front court when he passes or fumbles. (a) Fumbled ball goes directly to back court; or (b) the pass is touched by A2 and goes to back court; or (c) the fumbled ball is touched but not controlled by A2 and then goes to back court. In either case, ball is touched in back court by A3.

Ruling: These situations are difficult to handle in such a way as to be consistent with the rule. If there is any consistency, it is necessary to first fix the time at which control is the determining factor. The lesser of several evils seems to be to consider the state of the ball at the time it is caused to go to the back court. If, at that time, the ball is in control of a team, then it should be a violation. Under this method of administration, the Official will determine whether the ball was in control of a team at the time it was caused to go back, i.e., at the time touched by the last player. The last sentence of 6-6-b states that the last player to touch the ball is the one who caused it to go from front court to back court. Under the outlined circumstances, it is a violation in (a) and (b)

Basketball Play Situations

but it is not a violation in (c). In the interests of consistency, this is probably the best way to handle the matter. However, it is necessary to make an exception for the new interpretation on the Play in which A1 (who may be in front court or back court) makes a long try for goal and ball bounces directly to back court without touching any other player. In such case, the last player to touch the ball was A1 and at the time he touched it, his team was in control even though he later lost control through his try.

Regardless of how these related situations are handled they are not entirely consistent and the suggested rulings seem to be the lesser of several evils. They give the Official a principle to follow with only the one exception. Last year there were no exceptions to this principle since it was then ruled that a ball which rebounds directly to the back court was an illegal return if touched by the thrower's team.
